

IBHRE RECERTIFICATION REQUIREMENTS

(10 years after passing)

Purpose of IBHRE Recertification

The International Board of Heart Rhythm Examiners (IBHRE) recognizes continued competency through good standing in the practice and involvement in the heart rhythm management field. IBHRE Recertification (achieved by re-examination) promotes enhancement of the knowledge and skills essential to the delivery of optimal patient care.

Recertification is met by the following:

Ten (10) years after passing the exam, certified professionals must re-certify by re-examination. Certified professionals must also attest that they are currently active and involved in the field of cardiac rhythm management and that they remain in good standing within the medical community. Candidates who do not meet these requirements will lapse in their certification. (Effective January 1, 2010)

Recertification Process

Ten (10) years after achieving initial certification, certified professionals must:

- Achieve recertification by re-taking and passing the respective examination associated with their certification
- Indicate on their exam application that they are taking the exam to recertify and should complete the exam by the end of the tenth year.
- Submit the applicable exam fees and provide all necessary documentation to meet the stated exam eligibility requirements in order to qualify for the exam.

Additional Information for Recertification Candidates:

- Upon successful completion of the exam, candidates will be automatically recertified in the IBHRE database.
- They may only register for the exam administered during their year of recertification or one year prior.
- Candidates who do not pass the exam must take the examination again to reinstate their credential.
